Hague, June 3.

THE following Letter has been written to a Gentleman here.

Sir,

Frankfort, June 3.

YOU interest your self so much in the Case of our Brethren who have served in the Galley, that you will be glad to learn what I have received concerning them. You know in what Manner the Intendant and Commissaries of the Galleys at Marseilles obliged 44 Protestant Confessors to whom the King of France by his Order of the 7th of March last granted Liberty, to hire a Bark at their own Expence, for transporting them out of the Kingdom. The 26th of the same Month they were put aboard, and the Master of the Vessel was charged most expressly not to land them at any other Place than at St. Rhemi, on the Penalty of a Fine of 300 Livres.

They sailed from Marseilles the 3d of April, after having buried one of their Brethren of that Number of 44, who was 80 Years old, and who died soon as he was imbarke. Their Passage from Genoa to Geneva was tedious and toilsome, especially for the Aged among them, who are many, and for those who took Care of them. I have an Account that the 4th 5th and 6th of May they arrived at Geneva, in Number 43. They had divided themselves into several Companies, and had taken other Measures to avoid a publick Reception. But as they were expected, and twas judged pretty near what time they would arrive, they were soon discovered. Immediately all ran to receive them, the Magistrates and the Clergy shewed the Example, and the People in Crowds welcomed them with Acclamations, mixed with Tears of Joy to see them, and of Compassion for their Condition. Thus they were conducted as in Triumph to the House which was provided for them, where the principal of the Magistrates and Clergy entring with them, embraced them with Christian Cordiality. And after having made them sit down and rest themselves a while, they gave them the Consolation of reading to them a Letter from the Lords of Zurich and Berne to the Republick of Geneva, signifying, that those among the Brethren Confessors who would chuse to settle among them, should be maintained during their Lives, and that those who would rather pass into Germany Holland or England, should be defrayed as far as Basil, where 100 Crowns should be given to each for their comfortable Subsistence in their further Journey. You may please to call to Mind on this Occasion, that the Protestant Cantons and their Allies of the same Communion, took upon themselves the Charge of maintaining a bove an hundred of the hundred thirty six Galicians who were set at Liberty before these 44. After communicating to them this good News, the said Magistracy Clergy and others were quick to supply all their Wants, every one with Officers to serve them, some furnished them with Cloaths, the Women gave them Linnen, the Magistrates took Care they wanted nothing they could eat or drink or any other Accommodations; and the Pastors daily make them charitable Visits.

This kind Usage making a deep Impression on Men of tender Minds, who had been accustomed to all Manner of Indignities, they offered to take their Leave, that they might be no further Charge to a small Town which has been the Refuge of an infinite Number of the Afflicted who have resorted thither within these 19 Years past, and who have all been well-received: But the Inhabitants of Geneva detain them still, till they have thoroughly recruited their Spirits and Strength, so as to be well able to support the Fatigue of Travelling. They are visited still with the same Benevolence as on the first Day they came, and the like Honours are shewn them as to Persons of the most distinguished Quality: In a Word, the Charity exercised towards them is a Resemblance of what was practised in the primitive Church.
